

Utah Authors Day

Come meet amazing local authors!

Saturday, December 6th, 2025

Utah Authors Day is a tradition dating back to the 1930s that was revived by the League of Utah Writers in 2021. This holiday, which is recognized annually with an official declaration from the governor, is a fantastic opportunity to bring writers into their local communities to meet readers and celebrate Utah's wealth of literary talent.

A huge thanks to all who applied, authors we were able to place will receive an acceptance email with further details.

Spencer J. Cox

Governor

Declaration

Whereas, the literary history of Utah runs deep, ranging from the first pioneers binding their own books to the bestsellers of the modern-day;

Whereas, we recognize the essential need to encourage everyone in the great state of Utah to tell their own unique story and share their perspective through the written word;

Whereas, we ought to strive to strengthen the community to bond and grow together through the written word, now more than ever;

Whereas, we must impel young and aspiring authors by recognizing their efforts and celebrating the accomplishment of those who have come before;

Whereas, authors hailing from Utah have books in every book store in the state; and

Whereas, we need to continue to support the development of culture in Utah through the literary arts;

Now, therefore, I, Spencer J. Cox, governor of the great state of Utah, do hereby declare the first Saturday in December as

Utah Authors Day
